Miguel Abreu Gallery and Sequence Press are pleased to host Yuk Hui for a talk and launch of his recently released title, Post-Europe.

Today, we increasingly live in a state of becoming-homeless, while our homelessness also produces a desire for some form of homecoming, as is evident in the rise of conservative and neoreactionary movements the world over.

This sense of homelessness, which twentieth-century European philosophers spoke of—and which Heidegger declared had become the "destiny of the world"—has become a prevailing condition of globalized capitalism, and is set to turn ever more pathological in its consequences. But rather than dreaming of an impossible return to Heimat, Yuk Hui presents a rethinking of political and epistemological possibilities, and argues that today thinking must start out from the standpoint of becoming-homeless.

Drawing on the philosophies of Gilbert Simondon, Jacques Derrida, Bernard Stiegler, and Jan Patočka alongside the thought of Kitaro Nishida, Keiji Nishitani, and Mou Zongsan among others, Yuk Hui envisions a project of a post-European thinking. If Asia and Europe are to devise new modes of confronting capitalism, technology, and planetarization, this must take place neither through a neutralization of differences nor a return to tradition, but through an individuation of thinking between East and West.

Yuk Hui is the author of several books including On the Existence of Digital Objects (2016), The Question Concerning Technology in China: An Essay in Cosmotechnics (2016), Recursivity and Contingency (2019), Art and Cosmotechnics (2021), and Machine and Sovereignty: For a Planetary Thinking (2024). He is currently Professor of Philosophy at Erasmus University Rotterdam.

Seating is limited and available on a first-come, first-served basis.
